“ My Dearest Gramma, you allowed me into your family without question at the age of 16. Some 38 years later we find ourselves parting for a short while. I was only ever blessed with a grandmother as a child, she was my inspiration to everything that mattered in the short time I had with her. I know I've told you and grampa many times over the years, how excited I was to know that I would be getting a Gramma & Grampa the day Jay & I were married. I was proud to call you my grandparents, that will never change. You were there during happy times, sad times and everything in between. I've enjoyed many beautiful times with you through the years. My fondest memories were you teaching me how to make some of your german recipes: Cinnamon dressing, cabbage burgers, christmas cookies, butterballs & homemade noodles for noodle soup, to name a few. I never did master the star cookie recipe though.....so I guess I need to keep trying. I know the last time I tried to make them I ended up calling you because they just were not cooperating. You told me that I needed to have patience and we laughed. Gramma, I have to thank you for being such a loving, caring, beautiful & gracious person to me. You have left me with many wonderful memories & a warm fulfilled heart. I will love you always, Dottie

“ My dearest gramma. I have given this much thought and finally on our way home I think I have my thoughts together. Some of this you and I know but many others may not. I loved spending time with you and grandpa at your house. It didn't matter if I was little, a teenager, a young or middle aged man. I just liked spending time with you for no reason other to just spend the time. Simple as that. My first phone call was to you. Ma wrote the number down, showed me how to dial as I stood I a high stool. Well, who is this? Jay. Oh. Well, what do you want? Is everything ok? Yep. I just wanted to talk to you gramma. .. That was it. I was never too happy being away from saginaw. You knew this. I would have stayed. Kids have to do what their dad and mom say to do. As you know, I think it was a waste. I loved being with you and grandpa and my uncles and aunts and cousins. Later when we lived in the house of horrors you rescued me every Christmas, school vacation and summer from that chaotic hell. Being with you and grandpa was the only sanity and sanctuary I had for many years. I knew it, you knew it, grandpa knew it. How many times did I ask: do I have to go back? Can't I just live here with you? I'll be good. Grandpa would say, well, someone needs to look after your mama, but I know you considered it. I heard you talking to grandpa in non german, what school? Well, ed and Janice and roy did ok in school here. Once we finally got back to saginaw, I had dottie with me. You accepted her as your own grand daughter. She loves you and grandpa just the same as I do. You are her gramma too. She will miss you as much as I am. Gretchen too. He cried hard at church. I know you know how hard it has been to be away again. I know you almost begged us to move home. You know as much as we wanted out of ct and come home I just couldn't. Dottie deserves the success, just as you did at my age. We both knew it. Pastor garbow said something really nice at the funeral home. He has an uncanny ability to make me get a new perspective and feel better about things. He said. Even though you have gone to heaven, a large part of you is still here with us. Things you taught, said, have done together live on. Even though we can't talk or hold hands or just sit on the porch right now, we will again soon. In another much better place. There, jobs or my father or other things *will never get in the way. It's only temporary gramma. Maybe we can have some noodle soup together that day. I'm so blessed to have had you for my gramma. I will love and miss you till that day comes.

Love you, jay*
