“ Steve, I miss you so much! I think of you every time I look up into the sky, remembering how we looked at the stars, moon phases, and the planets from my back patio. You taught me a lot about the universe. The world just isn't the same without you in it. Rest peacefully dear brother.

“ Steve was always fun to be around, always there to look at the glass half full. Working with Steve at the Saginaw country club held so many memories, working every event, setting up for the next one, and always a helping hand. Steve was definitely a joker with the people he was around, and keeping everyone on their toes. Sorry this time came to soon and wish I could just have a chat over playing video games. You will truly be missed by peers, friends, and family.

“ Steve hired me as a banquet/event bartender back when I was in college. He was fully aware my bartending experience included venues from busy nightclubs to family restaurants to dive bars. He knew I could make a martini, manhattan, or virtually any cocktail at a moments notice without asking the ingredients. Well, while I knew my liquor and beer at that point in my bartending career I can honestly say that all I knew about wine was that it could be red or white, and sweet or dry. Turns out some white wine was colored red like a white zin, while a champagne labeled dry was actually anything but. Ill never forget when a member asked me for a glass of Syrah on my first week there, an hour later he found me in the wine cooler searching frantically. That's when he let out his signature genuine chuckle and explained to me it was a red wine and was not stored in the cooler but the cellar. In the few years I worked there that man taught me so much about wine that when I left there after only 3 years to move to Rhode Island I was able to immediately gain a job with a major wine and liquor company and was quickly promoted to leading wine seminars. I think what he taught me more than anything though is to give everybody a chance, always offer a hand whenever you see that one is needed, and most importantly to try and make others forget their sorrows and worries by replacing them with laughter and smiles. I enjoyed my time slingin' drinks with ya my man, and Ill always remember you pulling pranks on Evan, Slimmen, and myself. Take care my friend and rest easy, have a drink ready for me on the other side.

He would always pull pranks on us and and watch us fall into them. Whether it was say he didn't have a key to the ice chest once you were locked inside, or to telling ya something was wrong with your work outfit, never a dull moment.

My condolences to Steve's family, he will be greatly missed. I meet Steve many year's ago when he walked into my Ceramic Store and started looking around and came up to me and ask what do i need to paint these thing's, I remember one item was a bear bank. I started to explain to him and he looked so lost it wasn't funny... but it was, he ended up there for over an hour and we had lot's of laughs. Steve had this special something that drew you to be his friend and make ya laugh. Rest easy my friend for your whole again.
